STUDIO CULTURE

Carbondale, Colorado

A quiet mountain town on the western slope of the Continental Divide, Carbondale is a historic community of 7,000 people with a rich artistic identity.

Our office is located on Main Street right in the heart of our town's Colorado Creative Arts District. Inside, we celebrate an eclectic style from our collaborative design studio space to individual working areas that allow for free flow of ideas across people and projects.

Nature is truly out our front door with the 13,000' Mount Sopris as our datum directly south of town and the confluence of the Roaring Fork and Crystal Rivers to the north. We are a diverse group of individuals who each, in our own way, draw inspiration from this environment.

At lunch, you often find us choosing between lively cafes and restaurants along Main or at the seasonal Farmer's Market down the street. Many people bike or walk to work and we love to take advantage of the trails and open space for a quiet respite to recharge our creative energy. True Nature Healing Arts Center is one of our hallmark projects just a couple minutes walk away, with a reflexology path, yoga studio and many community events throughout the year.

We understand how important camaraderie and convenience are to the work/life balance. Our schedules are flexible to accommodate early risers or childcare and we provide formalized programs for continuing education, mentorship and socializing. We all strive to volunteer within the community to support local causes and events, and work with organizations to make our world a better place.

No two months are the same here, as we purposefully stretch our collective strengths across many different project sectors, including ranch planning, hospitality, parks and recreation. We provide services to clients from Calgary to the Navajo Nation, world class ski resorts and many amazing places in between. The firm became employee owned in 2001 and we now have a total of 60 employees across the four studios. The Carbondale office has a staff of 15, and is home base to our ecological services leadership.

Our company goals are to provide the highest level of design and professional growth while also maintaining the active, mountain west lifestyle that is part of where we live and who we are.

We look forward to making you a part of this team!
